WELCOME

Hey readers,

This month we're on a mission – to save Tasmanian devils! Find out why they need our help when you read our fantastic project pull-out on page 47. You'll also be able to help us name the baby Tasmanian devil we've just adopted – see page 55 for details. This issue is also packed full of great stuff – Horseland, Hellboy, Ben 10, Growing Up Creepy, WALL•E and The Mummy – there's something for everyone.

By the way – thanks to everyone who wrote in last month. Point Clare School in NSW wrote to tell us how they'd formed an environmental club – what a great idea! If you'd like to share your ideas, email them to me at dorothy@dmag.com.au.

See you next month,

Dorothy

EARTH WARRIORS!

Hil We are Point Clare School's 'Earth Warriors' Environmental Club and we have been busy exploring the environment around our school. We meet once a week to get outdoors and check out all the interesting things that share our environment – like about 30 bush turkeys!

We've adopted a huge gum tree. We used crayons to make bark rubbings and looked under the bark, around the roots and up in the highest branches. So many animals live in that tree – it's like an apartment building!

We also have lots of beautiful trees and in autumn they drop their gold and red leaves. We gathered up thousands of them and created two giant sunflowers, which really brightened up our basketball court on a cloudy day. We took photographs of the flowers then returned them to the environment.

We love being Earth Warriors and we love reading DMAG because it always has stuff about nature!

We've received stacks of wonderful letters this month! Send your letters and photos to: DMAG Dudes News, PO Box 1036, Spit Junction NSW 2088. All letters, photos and pictures published on this page in our next issue will win a set of Micador Thick & Thin markers.

Hi,
My name is Kayde and I'm 10 years old. I love Ben 10. It's the best show ever. My favourite character is Heatblast. He is awesome. My other favourite shows are Yu-Gi-Oh! GX and Pokémon. Thanks,
KAYDE

DEAR DMAG!

I love your mag. The best parts are So Gross, Dudes News, freebies and Game Guru. I am 9 years old and my fave movies are Jurassic Park and The Lion King. Sonic is soo cool! DMAG 4 ever!!
From,
ERIS
PS: This is my best lion drawing.

PET OF THE MONTH

Dear DMAG,

This is my very, very old dog, Emma. She is a 17 year old fox terrier. This is Emma sleeping in mum and dad's bed. She chases us around the yard when we are on the motorbikes or the mower. I think she's pretty good for her age.

LACHIE

If you want to get a FREE one-year subscription to the RSPCA's Paw Prints mag, then send a good quality photo of your pet (no print-outs on paper please) to DMAG Pet of the Month, PO Box 1036 Spit Junction NSW 2088.

DEAR DMAG,

I'm 11 years old. This is a picture of my pet wild bird who comes to my house and eats out of my hand every day. I've collected your magazine since issue 47 in 2006. I love Red Faces and So Gross.

HOLLY

HI DMAG,

My name is Jonathan and I am 9 years old. I love to read your magazine. My favourite hobbies are drawing, building LEGO Star Wars figures and playing my PS2. I have sent you a picture, which I drew of Gotten from DragonBallZ. Hope it is good enough for you magazine.

Bye,

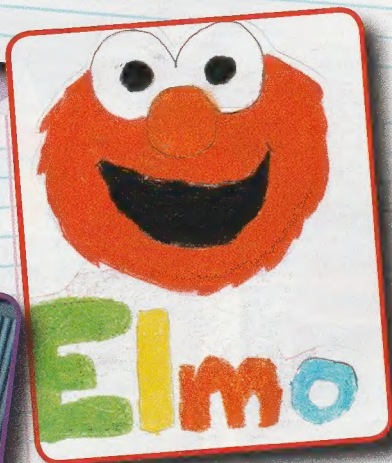

JONATHAN

HI DMAG,

My name is Christian. I'm ten years old. I think your mag is the best in the world. If I could rate your mag from 1 - 10, I would give you 10 because of your cool info and pics of Pokémon. That's why I drew this picture of Nine Tails.

From your #1 fans,

CHRISTIAN AND MY BRO, DAMIEN

DEAR DMAG,

Hey! My name is Deanna and me and my cousin, Loren have drawn a picture of Elmo for you. We drew this picture 'coz we think Elmo is very cute. From your fans,

DEANNA, 12, AND LOREN, 9

DEAR DMAG,

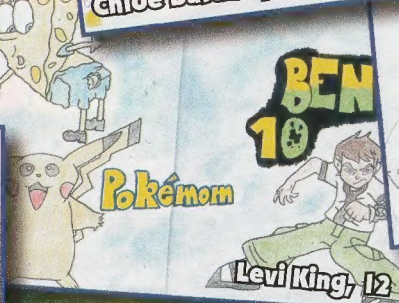

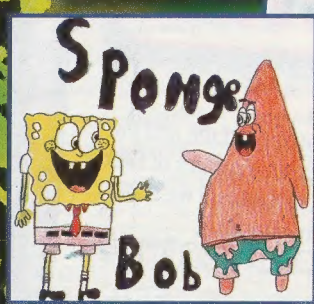

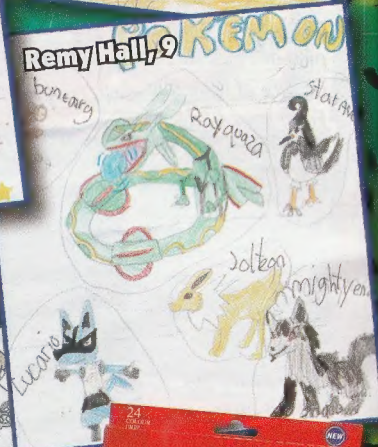

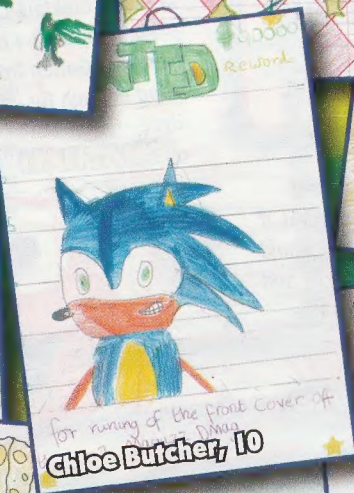

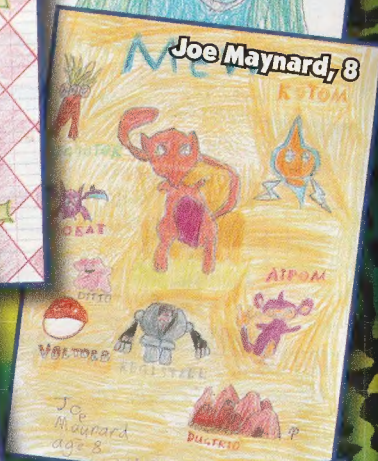

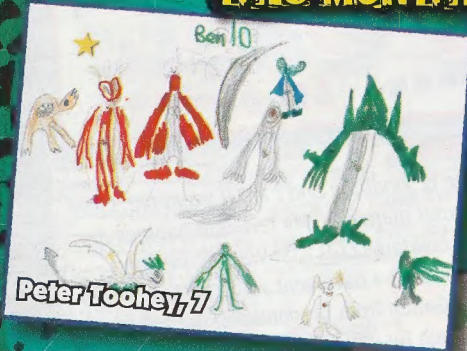

My name is Navarone and I am 6 years old.

This is a photo of my birthday. My mummy made me nice Ben 10 cupcakes on the day. Ben 10 is my favourite PlayStation game. I hope you enjoy my photo. From,

NAVARONE

WHAT'S GOING ON ...

SEPTEMBER 2008

Five MUST DO things this month ...

Don't buy dad socks on September 7 a.k.a. Father's Day (unless that's what he's asked for) - make him something special instead!

If you're in Brisbane on Father's Day, then spend some quality time with dad at the Bridge to Brisbane Fun Run. Register through www.bridgetobrisbane.com.au before September 5 and if you hit the finish line in time, you could even score dad a random draw prize!

Lock up the car on September 22 and sacrifice a day of travelling in luxury for World Car Free Day by walking, taking the bus or training it to school instead.

Brisbane dudes and dudettes, send a huge thanks to your precious catchments and waterways by checking out the festivities of the 2008 River festival from August 29 to September 7. Fireworks, water-wise billboards and even an F1 11 jet plane will be streaming along the Brisbane River, so swim in and join the fun!

September is the beginning of Spring and that can only mean one thing: flowers. Feast your eyes (and nose) upon the beautiful bloomers in the Hunter Valley Gardens this month during their Festival of Flowers.

Win!

WANT TO KNOW WHAT'S HOT AND

SHE'S BREAKING FREE

That's it. Enough is enough! After witnessing Hannah Montana win over millions of fans in her TV show, it only seems right that after years of playing her, Miley Cyrus should get her chance at the spotlight as well. Dropping Hannah's signature blonde wig, Miley's going solo and making her big CD debut! Called Breakout, her current single, See You Again has already broken into the Top 10 in our charts and we're guessing that her album will do the same when it's released later this year.

Ancient Magic

The island of MiYu is a mystical place. Millions of years old, it is an ancient land brimming with MiYu Magical Stones; each with its own natural power to give to whomever possesses it. Would you like to get your hands on one? There are over forty delicate gems to look out for and an online world to help you uncover the secrets (and powers) of your stone, which include success, love, courage and wisdom – if only! They'll be gracing shelves soon so, if you're ready to unleash the magic within, keep an eye out for them.

AND HAPPENING? THEN READ ON...

DREAMS AND REALITY

Miley Cyrus did it with her Best of Both Worlds concert tour and now singing sibling sensation Jonas Brothers are hopping onto the band wagon too by starring in their very own reality TV show, Jonas Brothers: Living the Dream. Catch them on stage, catch them offstage and then chase them down the go-karting track from September 8 at 5.25pm on the Disney Channel.

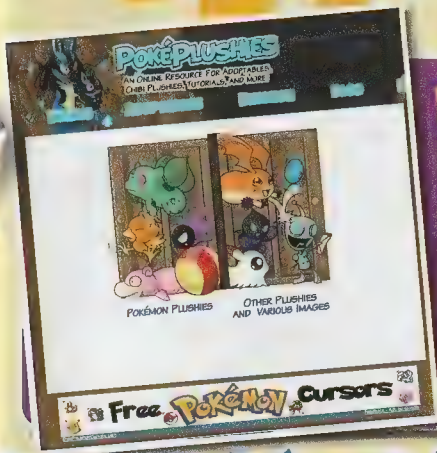

Dangerous Tidings

It seems that the guy who never says die, Blund, James Blund, can escape a gruesome accident... or two! Whilst filming the latest Bone Block, Queen of Solace, lead actor Daniel Craig accidentally cut the fate and had to have eight stitches to fix up the mess. It gets worse. A mere week later he was rushed back to the hospital after slipping off the top of his ladder during an action scene = ooh!

Website of the Month

Forget Neopets, they're so last decade (well, almost). According to DMAG duffette Deanna Clark, www.pokeplushies.com is the virtual pet central of today – and contrary to what the name suggests, you don't have to be a Pokémon lover to love this website either! "There are Digimon, Yu-Gi-Oh! Sonic the Hedgehog and even Fly!! adoptables," says Deanna. Awesome!

C-I-YO-EYE

Che mischievous Ci Boys are coming to town and they're making a huge ruckus while they're at it! As cool as bananas, these plastic fantastic figurines come in nine cheeky characters and are perfect for pocketing and collecting. Each never-to-be-repeated series, the first of which finds them stirring up trouble at the Beijing Olympics, has 12 rad and ultra-unique designs. But, if you think that you can do better, then just yank off their heads, hats and arms and muddle them up into a Ci Boy more fit to your liking! Nice one!

Poster Peek

Get excited 'cos it's another one of those FSM updates. After months of waiting we've finally managed to get our finger on the official High School Musical 3 poster. And yes, we're feeling generous enough to share it with all of you. Enjoy!

MR HOLLY-BOLLYWOOD?

Is Bollywood the new Hollywood? Hmm... possibly. After a trip to India, Hollywood bad boy, Will Smith was so inspired by the colour and music of their Bollywood films that he began making plans to produce and star in one of his own! "I really feel there is a marriage to be made between Hollywood and Bollywood," says Will who, by the way, has already got his eye on his leading lady. No, it's not his wife, but Bollywood hottie and former Miss World, Aishwarya Rai. Some girls have all the luck.

Catch Will Smith in Hancock, which is in cinemas now.

CAMPING OUT

Doo-doo-doo-doo. Doo-doo-doo-doo. OK so we all suspected that UK pop singer Robbie Williams was a little, hmmm, how do we put this nicely ... strange - but we honestly never expected this! Seems lately Robbie's been heading into the woods outside of LA armed with a tent, sleeping bag and other survival necessities in the hopes of nabbing a peep at a UFO. So far no luck, but perhaps adding a telescope into the mix of equipment might help.

BIKER GIRL

What Aussie songstress could possibly give all those extreme sports stars a run for their money? Goodness, no. It's not Delta Goodrem. (We wouldn't pull your leg that far!) The answer is none other than attitude-filled singer, Vanessa Amorosi. When asked to reveal something about herself that many people didn't know, Vanessa's answer was more than surprising: "I love dirt bikes. I own them and I race them." And from what we hear, she's pretty good at it too!

REVIEWS

Vanessa Hudgens Identified

Don't wait until the next instalment of High School Musical to find an excuse to

Various So Fresh: The Hits of Winter 2008

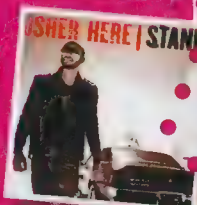

So cool. So breezy. So fresh. Five this compilation's twenty-track hit maker into your player and let the likes of Rihanna, PNAU and Rogue Traders warm you up nicely from winter into spring.

Usher Here I Stand

Watch out, Chris Brown. The real king of R&B a.k.a. Usher is back and is out to reclaim his throne with a heap of new tracks and even trickier, fancier and more eye-boggling dance moves than ever before!

SMALL TOWN STARS

You don't have to come from a big city like Hollywood to make it big in the music industry – just check out these rockin' singers and their hometown populations for proof!

Avril Lavigne: Napanee, Ontario, population: 5000.

Shannon Noll: Condobolin, NSW, population: 3500.

Duffy: Nefyn, North Wales, population: 2500.

Briney Spears: Kentwood, Louisiana, population: 2200.

Chris Brown: Tappahannock, Virginia, population: 2000.

COUNTRY GAL

Yes, this month, the country is where it's at! Even – dare we say it – former pop singer,

Jessica Simpson seems to be getting in on the action. Earlier this year Texas horn Jess announced loudly and proudly that, "I'm planning on making country music for the rest of my life." No joke. Her latest single, Come on Over has the official country twang to it and, according to the lovely lady herself, the rest of the album is bound to be no different!

HOPPING IN THE OUTBACK

Cross your fingers Aussie outbackers, word on the streets is that a hip hop artist along the lines of Kanye West or Lauren Hill could be heading your way! As part of a reality TV program called 4Real, celebs are sent to remote communities worldwide to witness, partake and help raise funds for the positive work being done there. And guess what? A remote community in Queensland has been proposed for an upcoming season. Filming begins in 2009 so keep an ear out for the sweet sounds of a US hip-hop sensation singing it up down under!

ROCK ON

THE WORD ON THE HERD

If you haven't heard of The Herd then here's the word on this awesome rap band by one of its (more) absurdly named band members, Toe-Fu.

DMAC: HOW DID YOU COME UP WITH THE NAME, THE HERD?

TOE-FU: We were just in a grassy plain one day and it all seemed so natural. As a band with eight people it really did seem like a herd when we went anywhere.

DMAC: DOES ANYONE HAVE ANY ANNOYING HABITS?

TOE-FU: Some of the ones we like most, that only in the morning, some of us like to have our hair at night. Some of us like to write with a pen, the other without a word of writing and some of us will just close together.

DMAC: HOW WOULD YOU DESCRIBE YOUR SOUND?

TOE-FU: Boom boom cha, b-boom boom-cha, boom boom be boom.

DMAC: DO YOU HAVE ANY FUNNY ON-TOUR STORIES?

TOE-FU: There's been an issue with a new comedy club but that seems to have no other that gets constantly put in bags. No more anything in the bag. Just the name of the bag. The bag is the bag.

DMAC: IF YOU COULD BE ANY ANIMAL, WHAT WOULD IT BE?

TOE-FU: I probably be a small cat with a wedge-tailed eagle. If I were, I could never be an animal, so I may as well be an imaginary super animal!

DMAC: WHAT DO YOU THINK MAKES THE HERD SO AUSTRALIAN?

TOE-FU: We're a chilled cat bunch who like pride in being able to talk to anyone about anything. Being Australian is an about respect. Respect for the past, respect for the present and respect for the future. I could go on but I won't, and I respect for your time.

This film has advertising approval. Check the classification closer to the release date

Please check with an adult before entering. The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor is anticipated to be M rated.

O'CONNELL TO THE RESCUE

Mummy kicking Rick O'Connell has returned in this third round of The Mummy flicks, Tomb of the Dragon Emperor. So, what else do you need to know about this adventurous movie? Here's what:

I WANT MY MUMMY

If two's company and three's a crowd, then what's four? A family – duh! Archaeologist Rick, his wife, son and brother-in-law are in trouble now that one of them has kinda, sorta, accidentally awakened the Dragon Emperor, an ancient 2000-year-old ruler with a diabolical desire to take over the world. Erm ... whoops? Armed with unimaginable superpowers and an army of 10,000 mighty warriors, this monarch's gonna be a tough one to beat.

LOCATION LOCATION

There comes a time in every archaeologist's life when he must leave the confines of his site and

ASIAN SENSATION

Wanna know more about ancient China? Grab the next issue of DMAG to read up on its many wonders, including its incredible terracotta army.

HISTORY BUFFS

What do you mean you haven't seen The Mummy films before? Have you been living under a rock all this time? We don't blame you, they are a little scary.

So if you haven't peeped out from under that rock, here's what each film is about.

The Mummy:

Rick's on an archaeological dig in Egypt and has uncovered (and resurrected) the fatally vengeful High Priest Imhotep. Uh-oh.

The Mummy Returns: Cursed and double cursed. Imhotep's back and badder than ever. Will Rick be able to defeat him a second time?

Tomb of the Dragon Emperor:

Oh, come on! You've been reading this page for how long now? You should know what this film is about!

AUSSIE, AUSSIE, AUSSIE

OK, so this flick might be set in China, but there is one Australian thing about it (or at least, only one that we know of). What is it? You're asking the wrong question, it should be: who is it? Luke Ford plays Rick's reckless archaeologist son, Alex. He's the reason why the Dragon Lord has been resurrected by the way, and he's also a true blue Aussie! Didn't see that one coming, now didcha?

journey across the world to some place new, like ... China? Yes, this time around ancient China is where all the exploration, resurrection and action can be found! Travelling through the catacombs of the terracotta warriors in Xi'an, over the freezing Himalayas and past the Great Wall of China, this is a journey that the O'Connell's had better have a map for.

EMPOWERED

What could make the evil Dragon Emperor in this film so powerful? Well, he does have control of all five elements: metal, wood, water, fire and earth. Ohhh, yeah, that would do it ...

Uncover The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor when it hits cinemas from September 11. Note: the rating of this film is pending at the time of going to print but it is expected to get an M rating.

IN THE BEWITCHING NEW DVD FLICK PENELOPE, THE HEROINE PENELOPE IS CURSED WITH A SNOUT FOR A NOSE. SCARILY, SHE'S NOT THE ONLY PERSON TO HAVE BEEN HORRIBLY CURSED. SPOOK YOURSELF OUT WITH THESE CREEPY STORIES...

the devil in exchange for his amazingly out-of-this-world musical talent and that the devil came to claim it back when he was 27. Freakily since then, heaps of other famous rockers like Nirvana's Kurt Cobain, Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin have been kicking the bucket at 27 as well. Coincidence? Probably...

COMPLETELY MAD

Footy players beware... you're in for a scare! As with many sports, the NFL (the USA's National Football League) has its own videogame called Madden NFL, and whilst we're sure it's a great play, you wouldn't want to have your face gracing its shiny cover. Why not? Well, according to the Madden Curse, whichever player appears on the cover is jinxed with poor performance or injury for the season.

RUSSIAN REVENGE

If we didn't warn you before, we're warning you now: never get on the bad side of a wizard ... erm, psychic! In the early 1900s in Russia, the royal Romanovs' mystic, Grigori Rasputin, predicted that the entire Romanov family would die within two years if he were to be killed by one of them. He was. Perhaps he really was psychic, but others believe that he placed this curse on the family himself whilst on his deathbed, seeking revenge. Whatever it was, he was more than right. The Romanov family was soon gone. Thing is, so were a lot of other families, it was World War I after all!

Can Penelope lift her curse? See for yourself when Penelope, starring Christina Ricci and Reese Witherspoon comes out on DVD September 3.

Camera Men

Ever wonder how films are made? Kids Will and Lee from the funny flick about a flick, Son of Rambow know how. After all, they're writing, producing and starring in one themselves! Here's a sneak peek at their story ...

The Script!

The story's all still a little hush-hush as Will doesn't want his conservative family to get a hold of his masterpiece, but so far, this is what we've read. Dogs will fly and people will overdose on Space Dust in Will's hilarious, manic up-sequel to the famous Rambow movies. This isn't about Rambow though, this is about the son of Rambow! And you, having been written by a kid, this script has been penned down quickly and hasn't been run through the spell-checker, hence the "w" at the end of Rambow.

The Lead Actor

When you're the brains behind a film like Will is, you tend to get more than your fair say over who gets to be the lead. So, why not choose yourself? A novice actor, this is Will's film debut and he's not taking it lightly. Stopping on the war paint, he's not afraid to jump straight in and tackle his own stunts. Wicked!

Cast and Crew

OK everyone, crowd in! It seems with film comes fame. The moment their classmates heard Lee scream out "action" from behind his camera, they were all teeming to nab a spot on the credit listing. Question is, is there enough film to fit them all?

Check out all the behind-the-scenes action and mayhem of Will and Lee's film when Son of Rambow rolls into cinemas from September 4.

Battle of the Beasts

He's big, he's red and he's the unlikely hero of the action-packed sci-fi flick, Hellboy II: The Golden Army. He's Hellboy and he's not the only awesome creature in this mythical battle to save planet Earth ...

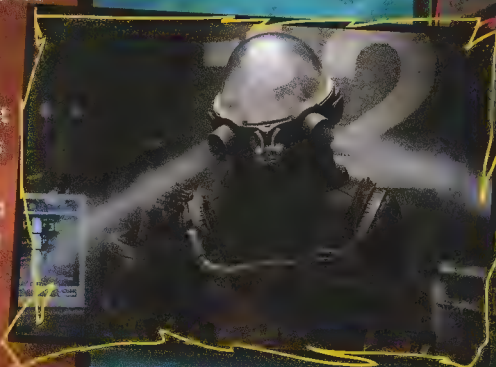

punch of fire-filled bolts onto anyone who dares to get in her way. What a scorcher.

HELLBOY

There's a reason why this red brute doesn't look like your typical superhero, and that's because he wasn't meant to be. Sent to Earth from the depths of the underworld, Hellboy was supposed to be evil but was saved by Dr. Broom and taught to do good instead. Now he fights evil with a red fist and a gigantic automatic. Woah!

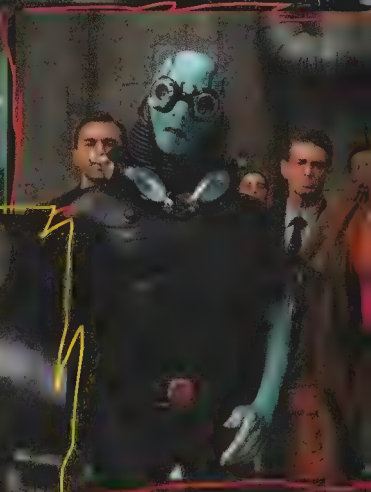

LIZ SHERMAN

Pretty much the most human of the lot, Liz is smoking hot – literally! With a single chant of “the fire is not my enemy, it is a part of me,” this pyromaniac can pack a flamin’

ABE SAPIEN

Foul-mouthed, Abe fancies the more rotten things in life. His delicacy of choice? Rotten eggs – gross! That aside, Abe is a sweetheart who is on the search for justice. An aquatic empath, he wears an Aqua-Lung to breathe on land and can read the past and future of any object.

JOHANN KRAUSS

Is this a ghost or an astronaut? Well, technically he's a disembodied ectoplasmic mystic. Erm ... OK, for all of you who aren't familiar with the paranormal

PRINCE NUADA

An exile by nature, this evil ruler returns to the mythical land of Bethmoora, armed with his unsightly Golden Army, vowing to reclaim a throne he reckons is rightfully his. Is there nothing that evil won't do for a bit of power?

WINK

Prince Nuada's right hand man, Wink is a troll with not too much in his mind ... or is it? He'll do anything his master commands, from setting fire to fabled mother farms to grabbing Hellboy with his iron snare. What a baby!

that Johann doesn't really have a body. So he wears a thick suit to keep him all in one place! As for the mystic part, well isn't that obvious? Johann can speak to the dead. Oh, and he can also give inanimate objects life. Cool, huh?

ANGEL OF DEATH

Just as her name suggests, this female is the grim reaper. Made of dust and sand, this underworld creature holds a secret about the future that not everyone will be dying to hear about.

here's a quick explanation. Johann is made completely out of ectoplasm, a gaseous substance that some believe ghosts let out, which means

Check out this creature feature by catching Hellboy II: The Golden Army in cinemas from August 28.

NB: Hellboy II is rated M, just like the last Harry Potter movie, and includes elements of fantasy and action that may be scary to younger children.

Ben Tennyson may be an alien-battling hero in the TV series Ben 10, but he's also an ordinary ten year-old boy, as DMAG found out...

WHAT'S YOUR FAVOURITE FOOD?

Ben: Anything, as long as it's not Grandpa Max's cooking! Come on, who likes kidney stew ... yuck, just thinking about it makes me sick.

WHAT'S YOUR FAVOURITE SUBJECT AT SCHOOL?

Ben: Any subject that Gwen sucks at - which is all of 'em! Also, I think schools should start teaching a subject on "How to Be a Hero" ... Maybe I could teach it!

HOLIDAY BEFORE YOU FOUND THE OMNITRIX?

Ben: Just travelling the country with Grandpa Max in the RV, as usual, and annoying Gwen, which is always

A BOY CALLED

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO BE WHEN YOU GROW UP?

Ben: Are you kidding?! Of course, I'll continue to be a hero! It rocks to transform into aliens and save the world from the bad guys!

HOW WERE YOU PLANNING TO SPEND YOUR SUMMER?

sweeeeeet! But everything became so much cooler after I found the Omnitrix.

WHICH IS YOUR FAVOURITE ALIEN TO TURN INTO AND WHY?

Ben: Well, I'm still playing around with the Omnitrix so I don't really have a favourite yet ... but give me a little time to find out which alien annoys Gwen the most and I'll get back to you.

IF YOU COULD GET THE OMNITRIX TO DO ANYTHING BESIDES TURN YOU INTO AN ALIEN, WHAT WOULD YOU GET IT TO DO?

Ben: Turn Gwen into a rat! She looks like a rat already, but it would really rock to see her with a rat's head – permanently!

WHAT'S THE BEST THING ABOUT BEING BEN 10?

Ben: Being a superhero, duh?! There is nothing better and cooler than being able to change into different aliens, shoot fireballs, lift heavy weights and kick the bad guys' butt!

WHAT'S THE WORST THING?

Ben: That Grandpa Max and Gwen won't let me tell other people I'm a super hero. That really sucks sometimes...

WHICH DO YOU PREFER: ANALOGUE OR DIGITAL WATCHES AND WHY?

Ben: What's the use of watches when you've got an Omnitrix! Superheroes don't need watches – we run on hero time!

DO YOU THINK YOU AND GWEN WILL EVER COMPLETELY GET ALONG?

Ben: What?!? Who would ever want to get along with that annoying Goody-Two-Shoes and Miss Know-It-All? Never!

IF GWEN IS SHORT

FOR GWENDOLYN, IS BEN SHORT FOR BENJAMIN?

Ben: No comment. Some things are better left unsaid.

YOU SEEM PRETTY FEARLESS. IS THERE ANYTHING THAT ACTUALLY SCARES YOU?

Ben: You are right, I'm pretty

D'REVIEW

Ben 10 – Season 4

Summer break's nearly over, so does that mean that Ben 10's gonna get a break from battling those evil aliens? He wishes! With the Negative 10 baddies about, Ben will have to outwit, outsmart and outalien like never before if he wants to come out of this on top. Alien-tastic!

fearless! But have you ever seen clowns ... those freaky white faces ... and ... and those big red shoes. It is not right! They give me the willies!

WHICH CAME FIRST, THE ALIEN OR THE OMNITRIX?

Ben: The Omnitrix, of course! HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT BEING TURNED INTO A REAL-LIFE CHARACTER, IN THE LIVE ACTION MOVIE, RACE AGAINST TIME?

Ben: It rocks to become a real-live action hero. Now more people can see how I, Ben Tennyson, save the world and that feels greeeat!

Tune-in Time:

Don't miss Ben 10: Race Against Time, September 20, Saturday at 6pm, only on Cartoon Network!

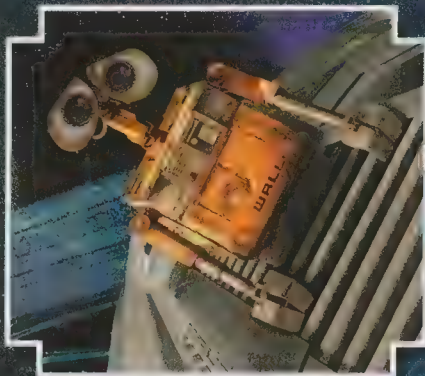

Welcome

If you're wondering what in the world is WALL-E from the fab new flick, WALL-E, then plug yourself into this page and download the answers into your hard drive (and by hard drive, we mean brain).

The World As We Know It ...

... has gone! It's over 700 years into the future and Mother Earth is now a mother of a wasteland. There's so much rubbish about that all humankind has been forced to live in space - on the spaceship Axiom - whilst the cleanup patrol does its best to fix up the mess. And that's where WALL-E comes in ...

Waste Not, Want Not

So who is WALL-E? Well, he's a robot for one. A Waste Allocation Load Lifter of the Earth-class, WALL-E's directive is to crush the city's junk into cubes and pile them up into enormous skyscrapers.

Practically alone, all he has is a tiny cockroach friend and one videotape that he plays over and over again ...

Do the Robot

Although most robots don't have a personality, WALL-E's been around long enough

WALL•E

60s Revival

Guess what? There is actually a dance move called The Robot! It was big in the 60s and 70s (so your parents/grandparents may know it!) and involves moving your arms and legs around like a robot!

to have developed one. He has his own little carter-type horse, where he keeps all his spare-parts, knick-knacks and trinkets that he has found on his disposal rounds and a movie, which he loves to dance to, called Hello, Dolly!

Adam and Eve

Boy has this hot got problems! When the beautiful robot EVE descends onto Earth, on a mission to find some form of life on it, WALL-E makes it his mission to win her over. But it seems that her mission is far greater than his ...

Get robotic! WALL•E dances into cinemas from September 18.

Creepie Creecher from the TV show, Growing Up Creepie, isn't your average human, she's actually been adopted by bugs! But she's not the only one to be taken in by another species, check out these real life strange adoptees ...

Strange

WOLFMOTHER

Being raised by bugs is positively tame compared to this true-to-life Tarzan tale. Last year, a boy was said to have been found running and scavenging for food with a pack of wolves in Russia. Thought to be only ten years old, he must be have been quite young when he took to the wild because he couldn't speak Russian, had toes that looked like claws, strong canine-like teeth and walked around with his legs half bent. Talk about acting like an animal!

TIGGER AND PIGLET

It might take a big loving Pooh Bear to help keep Tigger and Piglet together, but in real life they wouldn't be caught alive next to each other ... or would they? Prepare to be stunned. For years now tigresses at the Sriracha Tiger Zoo in Thailand have actually been adopting piglets! Fearsome as they may seem, these tigresses put their animal instincts aside to nurse and suckle baby piglets as their own. Sweet, yet kinda scary ...

SNAKE SNACK

If it's a fact that rat snakes love to snack on small rodents, then wouldn't you expect that one would relish the chance to gobble down a hamster? Well yes, that's what keepers at a Tokyo zoo thought too when they presented one of their rat snakes with a dwarf hamster.

Catch more
interspecies action with Growing Up Creepie,
Fridays @ 4.55pm on ABC1.

Strangely enough though, the snake didn't think this furry fella was a feast, but a friend and took him in as a cage-mate. Awww.

BIRDS AND BEES

If there's one bird that's got to be clueless about motherhood, it's the European cuckoo. A brood parasite by nature, when ready to lay her egg, this bird will push one of the eggs in a reed warbler's nest out and replace it with her own for it to look after instead! It doesn't stop there. Once the egg hatches, the cuckoo chick will push the warbler's eggs out so that it can have all the food for itself. How cunning!

KITTY LOVE

Seems like we're not the only ones who like to take in other animals for pets. Koko, a lowland gorilla living in California, has an adorable habit of adopting kittens. She plays with them, carries them on her back and even dresses them up in napkins! Yup, a definite soft spot, Koko's so in love with these felines that The Three Little Kittens is even her favourite book! No, seriously. It is.

CHARACTER CLONING

Now that the new animated Star Wars: The Clone Wars flick is about to hit cinemas, the question must be asked: which Star Wars character are you a clone of? Take our quiz to find out.

Anakin Skywalker

Like Anakin, you may be quick to learn, but at times you're also so quick off the mark that you end up in a gigantic mess! Sometimes it's better to slow down, take a deep breath and let the Force be with you.

Obi-Wan Kenobi

Noble and disciplined, like Obi-Wan you're a patient teacher and follower who easily earns respect wherever you go and that's because you give respect back. Well done my friend.

Let the cloning begin! Star Wars: The Clone Wars is in cinemas from August 14.

Ahsoka Tano

Headstrong and determined. Like Ahsoka, you're not one to back down when fighting for a worthy cause or for something that you believe in.

Master Yoda

Hmmm. Wise you are. Never one to do anything on impulse, like Yoda, you always think long and ponder over decisions and consequences before taking a call to action. An important trait to have, indeed.

You'd better run if you see a psychotic tornado about 'cos it might be Taz the Tasmanian devil and if there's one thing on his mind, it's food. But if your legs won't budge, then these tactics are sure to keep this carnivorous cartoon from turning you into a meal.

THE LOONEY BIN

Like Bugs, Daffy and Tweety, Taz is a Looney Tunes character. Created in 1954, he's known for grunting, growling, blowing raspberries and gobbling up everything in sight.

LIKE ONLY A WOMAN CAN

She's more than a woman, she's a She-Devil! OK, you got us. She's really a he and by that, we mean he's Bugs Bunny. HUH? Taz has a weakness for female Tassie devils. But if there aren't any in sight for him to go all ga-ga over, then that rascally rabbit Bugs Bunny has been known to dress up as a girl in the hopes that Taz doesn't add rabbit soup to his menu. Hmmm ... got any other options? We sure do!

SAVE A DEVIL

Even Warner Bros is getting in on the fight to save the real Tasmanian devil from extinction. In 2006 it gave the Tasmanian government the thumbs up to sell Taz dolls to help raise funds for research into the devil facial tumour disease. Check out our Project Pull-out on page 47 to see what YOU can do to help save Tassie devils too!

DADDY TAZZIE

Dadda? Taz might not seem like he has a brain, but he does have a heart and has fallen for a blanket disguised as a baby Taz devil before. So grab some spare cloth, bundle it up as if there's something inside it and congratulate ol' Taz on becoming a father. He'll be so shocked he won't know what to do!

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Lions. Octopus. Bears. Elephants. You name it, Taz will eat it. So what's the best way to divert his salivating tongue away from you? Why, by giving him something else to drool over! Search the freezer for some frozen chicken, stick it under his nose and when he's busy gobbling that down, bolt outta there!

HIDE AND SEEK

Take a page out of Bugs' book. If rabbit is what Taz wants, then don't be a rabbit! Bugs has bought himself time to get away in the past by pretending to be a monkey. So, if Taz is hungering for human, then pretend to be something else. A snail maybe. Or a rock. Those don't sound tasty at all!

Craving for some fan-Taz-tic toons? Flip over to page 91 to see what else Taz has been chomping on. Yep, we have a sneak peek of Taz's Activity Special magazine, which is out now!

DINGO STINK-O

Perennial! Some stink bombs might be powerful enough to clear a roomful of people, but what disgusting odour is powerful enough to clear an area of kangaroos? Dingo reel Researchers discovered that by placing gels filled with fresh dingo pee around a feeding station, many kangaroos refused to set tail or foot in the area! Surprisingly, it wasn't the stench that did the dirty work, but chemicals in the pee that made them fearful to go near it. Researchers are now working on turning these chemicals into an effective alternative to harmful poisons to keep kangaroos and marsupials out of important farming and reforestation areas. Good-o, dingo!

SUN POWER

The Solar Boat Challenge has returned! With over $30,000 worth of goodies up for grabs for your school, now's the time to get building. So grab your teacher and some mates and create a ...

- Wire Guided Model Boat: Nice and lightweight, these boats are only allowed to have one motor and must be fitted with wire guides to ensure that they sail straight.
- Remote Controlled Model Boat: A treat for the tech savvy, these water rippers can have as many motors as you like and may be radio controlled to help outwit the competition.
- Piloted Boat: A true challenge, make sure you rope your teacher in to help you out if you're planning on taking this one up. Powered solely by sunlight and fitted with two signal devices, this will by far be the race of the day!

The Solar Boat's National challenges are running from August to November, so paddle over to www.solarchallenge.com.au for more info and to register.

HAPPY TRAILS

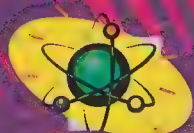

Fancy a little getaway but not quite sure where to go? Here's an idea: grab your family and friends and get a whiff of fresh air on September 14 by joining the Great Australian Bushwalk! Heaps of Aussies across the nation will be lacing up their joggers, grabbing their water bottles and heading out on guided walks across our magnificent mountain ranges, rainforests, beaches, marshlands and heathlands – so why don't you? Not only is it a great family day out, you'll get stacks of exercise – awesome! To get in on the action, trek over to www.greataustralianbushwalk.org.au and register before the day.

WEIRD SCIENCE

Amphibimorph

This is one inside out affair that is sure to make your skin crawl. Yes, claw. Whilst conducting research in South Africa, a biologist from Harvard University uncovered the Wolverine of all amphibians. In other words, a species of frog that, when threatened by a predator, will push its toe bones out of its skin, creating visible "claws", which it will then use to defend itself! So far the Harvard team has found an amazing 11 species with this ability and are hopeful that there are a couple more still out there. Better remember to keep those gloves handy guys. These are so not your average amphibians!

COURTESY OF NASA/JPL

This Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter was used to help determine the size of this crater.

THE GREATER CRATER

The crater that Dave in the flick, Meet Dave created when he crash-landed on planet Earth is probably a tiny speck in the very faint crater.

Officially the largest crater in our Solar System (so far, that is), space gurus NASA believe that this Martian basin is the result of some colossal impact that occurred when our Solar System was being formed.

So how big is big? Well, if Mars' circumference is 21,344 kilometres and this crater covers about 40 per cent of Mars' surface, that means ... it's about 853 kilometres wide. Yowzer!

Bot Ball

The isn't weird science, this is weird sports science! In what seems like an updated version of foosball, robotic researchers worldwide have taken robotic AI (artificial intelligence) to the next level by creating super-robotic football teams! Equipped with cameras, sensors and internal processors that allow them to strategise against their robotic opponents, these fellas can recognise the ball, sidelines, goalposts and players without so much as a remote control to tell them what to do. What's next, Taking on the World Cup? Absolutely yes, says the team at RoboCup, but not until (hopefully) the year 2050.

Tassie Devils!

Help save our endangered devils

It's a pitch black night in the Tasmanian wilderness. Horrible shrieking sounds are coming from nearby, and then you see it, a creature with blood-red pointy ears ... aaagh! It's a devil!

OK that's enough of that! We all know how Tasmanian devils got their name (if you don't, the previous paragraph was a clue) but we reckon that devils have been hard done by. They're just way too cute and character filled to be considered scary, as you'll see in this project pull-out.

These amazing marsupials are facing extinction – they're being wiped out by a terrible disease. And a quick warning – it's not pretty. If we don't act now we might not save them. But luckily we can all help – read on to find out how.

Inside: Map of Tasmania – Baby devils – How to help – Great photos – Fast facts

A devil of a

Tim Faulkner from the Australian Reptile Park with some healthy young Tasmanian devils.

Tasmanian devils are facing extinction in the wild from a terrible disease. We asked Tim Faulkner, the Head Tasmanian Devil Keeper at the Australian Reptile Park, to tell us all about it ...

“The thing that’s getting them is a tumour. It’s not painless and they don’t die quickly. It’s horrifying and they die of starvation,” explains Tim. Tumours are lumps of cells that have gone out of control, causing them to grow quickly in ways that the body’s cells wouldn’t normally grow.

In the case of the Tasmanian devils, most of the tumours seem to grow around the face, which is why the disease has been called the Devil Facial Tumour Disease (DFTD).

The tumours, which are a form of cancer, start around the mouth and grow bigger until eventually the poor devils can’t feed any more. They usually die of starvation about six months after the tumours first appear.

The reality

It’s very disturbing to think about this disease, but it’s spreading so quickly that we have to think about it.

time

There's a chance that before you even finish high school, devils will have been wiped out. As at May 2008, the outlook was that Tasmanian devils would be extinct in the wild within three to 20 years.

It's grim news, but there is a small bright side ...

The West is spared

So far, western populations in Tasmania have been spared. About a third of the state has a healthy population.

All that separates the healthy devils from the infected ones is a mountain range and some lakes

This is what the devil facial tumour disease looks like. It's not pretty, but imagine how the poor little devil feels. This disease will kill it.

though. So, over time, it's expected that this population will also become infected.

But for now, we've still got some healthy devils. And here's the good news. We've taken some of the strongest and healthiest, and shipped them to mainland Australia, to breed them. It's a bit like Noah's Ark, so they've called the rescue mission "Project Ark". Turn the page to find out more ...

Project Ark

Zoos across Australia are working to save the Tasmanian devil. We visited the Australian Reptile Park to find out more ...

The Tasmanian devils at the Australian Reptile Park have identification tags clipped in their ears.

One of the first things you notice when you see the Tasmanian devils at the park is that they're nothing at all like that crazy cartoon character Taz.

They're almost cute, with glossy dark coats, the occasional white marking and stacks of personality. Tim says that they have really strong characters, and working with them, he's come to know them all individually.

He's become especially fond of a cheeky little one called G'Day G'Day, but you'll meet him later ...

Zoos to the rescue

Tim's been to Tasmania and seen the disease ridden devils first-hand, so he knows how important it is to save them.

Eight mainland zoos and wildlife parks are taking part in Project Ark. Each received some healthy Tasmanian devils in late 2006 and/or

Did you know?

Tasmanian devils are scavengers, meaning that they'll happily eat animals that have already been killed. It might sound gross but they do us a favour, because they clean up dead creatures like road-kill. Their jaws are so powerful that they can crunch through flesh, fur and even bones!

2007, as part of the national effort to save the species.

It's hoped that these healthy animals will breed, and build up a big population so that if things do go wrong in Tasmania, their offspring can be reintroduced once the threat of DFTD has passed.

Quarantine

But taking animals from Tasmania and breeding them isn't as easy as it sounds.

For a start, what happens if the animals from Tasmania accidentally infect the mainland's captive Tasmanian devils? Then the whole insurance population would be at risk.

To safeguard against this, the Tasmanian recruits were put into strict quarantine and devils from the park, the next task was getting them to breed.

Ready to mate

You see, female Tasmanian devils are only in-season, or in oestrus, for nine days in the entire year – three days in February, three days in May (if they don't already have joeys) and three days in June/July. When they're in-season, males can mate with them.

It can be easy for a zookeeper to miss those kept separate from the other animals for a full year.

And when they were allowed to mix with other Tasmanian three days. Luckily the Australian Reptile Park has been paying attention, because their Tasmanian devils have managed to breed.

Which is where the next part of our journey begins, in mum's pouch ...

G'Day G'Day

One of the most exciting events for any zookeeper is when one of their charges has babies! Tim told us all about the birth of G'Day G'Day, the cutie shown opposite ...

“When G'Day G'Day was born he had no back legs, no tail, no ears and his eyes weren't even slits,” says Tim.

Was G'Day G'Day normal? Perfectly. Like most marsupials, Tasmanian devils are born as tiny, naked little creatures. But G'Day G'Day, although barely the size of a jellybean, did have one thing working for him ... his nose!

Like the rest of the litter, G'Day G'Day followed his nose, and the milk trail in his mother's fur, to find himself a teat. Once there, he latched on and didn't let go.

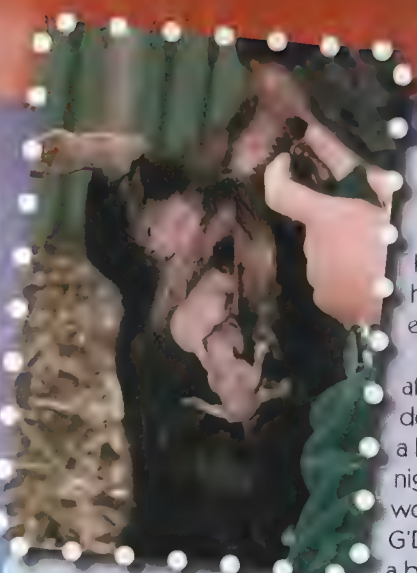

Survival of the fittest

G'Day G'Day's mum, Patch, was pregnant for only 21 days when she had her litter. She might have given birth to more than four young, but, like all female Tasmanian devils, she only had four teats, and that means space for only four newborns.

Now when we said G'Day G'Day didn't let go of the teat, we weren't kidding. He held on for four months!

During this time, thanks to all mum's milk, he grew. His little paddles at the front turned into legs and paws, and he grew back legs, a tail and fur. And just before he was ready to venture out of the pouch, he opened his eyes.

Tasmanian devils have a backwards facing pouch. These joeys, which were bred at Taronga Zoo as part of Project Ark, are so young they don't have fur yet.

The real world

When they're ready to leave the pouch they're quite big. But mum still doesn't trust them entirely on their own. She'll often leave the joeys together in a hollow log until she returns. After another couple of months they're off the baby milk and ready for the real world.

Well that's what happens in the wild. G'Day G'Day's upbringing was slightly different ...

The escape artist

After G'Day G'Day left the pouch, Tim hand reared him. "He was a little escape artist," says Tim. "He would climb, dig, push ... every time I turned my back he would be off exploring."

Tim likens looking after a baby Tasmanian devil to looking after a human baby. Every night Tim would give G'Day G'Day a bottle. He'd keep him warm, wash him down with a face towel (Tasmanian devils are very messy eaters) and clip his nails. With five feeds a day and lots of pooping to clear up, Tim was a busy man.

But his favourite memory is of G'Day G'Day snuggling under his jumper, trying to get under his armpit where he felt warm and safe.

Breeding success

The Australian Reptile Park has been very successful at breeding Tasmanian devils, and so have some other zoos - the naked joeys shown on this page were bred at Taronga Zoo.

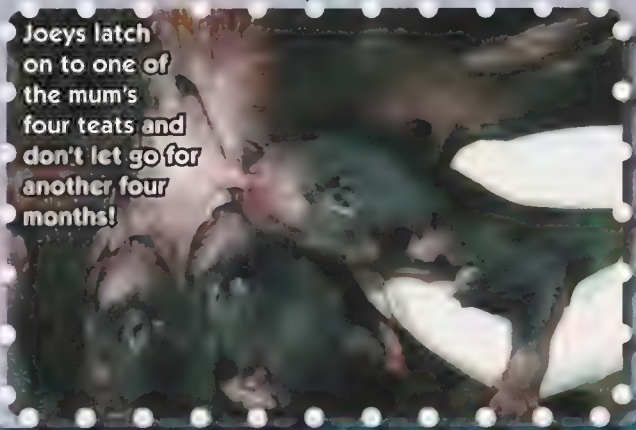

But will they be successful enough? It's estimated that we need at least 500 Tasmanian devils on the mainland for the species to survive. That's a lot of babies we want!

This is G'Day G'Day as a young joey being hand-reared at Tim's place.

Joeys latch on to one of the mum's four teats and don't let go for another four months!

Help save them!

If you don't want the Tasmanian devil to go the same way as the Tasmanian tiger, help us save them ...

K, you've heard it before, but it's true – raising awareness about what's happening to the devils is very important. Tell your family, friends, classmates and teachers. Spread the word and somewhere along the line, someone might donate money to help save the Tasmanian devil.

Did someone say donate?

DMAG is going to donate money too, and you can help! Each month, DMAG will be printing a "Save the Tasmanian devil" token. We will be printing five tokens in a row. If you collect all five and send them in to us, we'll donate 30c to the Australian Reptile Park and the Tasmanian devil appeal.*

If you collect four tokens, we'll donate 20 cents. And three tokens 10 cents.

Just think, if 10,000 DMAG

readers collect five tokens each, we'll donate $3,000!

And remember, you don't have to donate the money, we'll do it for you. You just have to collect the tokens in each DMAG, and then send them in at the end.

The tokens start next month in DMAG as well as regular updates on how our baby devil is going ...

We've adopted!

Yes, DMAG has adopted one of the Australian Reptile Park's newest litter. And we want you to name him! See the opposite page for details on how to enter.

And remember, with everyone's help, we might be able to help save the Tasmanian devil!

For more tips on saving the Tasmanian devil see www.tassiedevil.com.au or www.dmag.com.au

NAME THE DMAG DEVIL!

The Australian Reptile Park and DMAG would like your help to name DMAG's baby Tasmanian devil!

Everyone who sends in an entry will get sent an Australian Reptile Park 'FREE child entry with paying adult' pass.

The winner will get the honour of naming DMAG's Tasmanian devil, plus they'll get a family* Behind the Scenes VIP Tour of the Australian Reptile Park, a goodie bag, and the chance to meet some Tasmanian devils!

We're looking for names that will reflect the Tasmanian devil's personality, its heritage or the battle it's facing to stay alive.

To enter, fill in the form below and send it to DMAG Devil Comp, PO Box 1036 Spit Junction NSW 2038.

*Notes: 1) Family pass is for 2 adults and 2 children. 2) FREE child entry with paying adult passes will be emailed to recipients unless requested otherwise. 3) See page 98 for terms and conditions.

Did you

G'Day! I'm Red the Red Kangaroo from the Australian Reptile Park here to share with you the cool nature and environment facts that I found this month. Check them out...

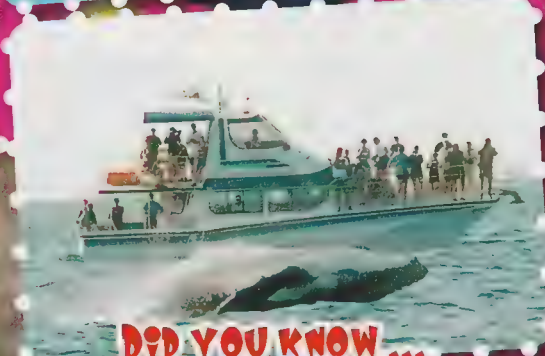

DID YOU KNOW...

The giant saguaro cactus can grow up to an amazing 15 metres tall and live for a whopping 200 years.

DID YOU KNOW...

Nearly 35 per cent of the world's amphibians are endangered.

DID YOU KNOW...

Humpback whales can carry up to 450 kilograms of barnacles attached to their bodies.

DID YOU KNOW...

A giant puffball usually contains around 7000 billion spores.

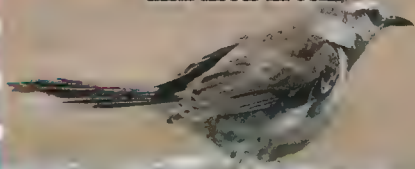

know?

DID YOU KNOW...

The technical term for a group of jellyfish is a smack of jellyfish.

DID YOU KNOW...

Mockingbirds in the Galapagos Islands have been known to pluck the hairs off passing tourists and use them to build their nests ... eek!

DID YOU KNOW...

The production of one kilogram of new printer cartridge emits an equal one kilogram of greenhouse gas emissions.

Check out this month's environmentally-friendly top tip and you'll see how easy it is to make the world a cleaner and greener place for all of us to live in!

Top Tip:

SHARING IS CARING

There's no denying that toys are great, but if you have a tendency to break or get sick of them easily, then really that's not so great. Most toys are made, directly or indirectly, from natural resources, so if you keep buying up, these resources are quickly lost. Some ways to counter this is to buy more durable toys, buy second-hand toys, pass your old toys to your siblings when you outgrow them or share any old videogames that you've tired of with your mates. You'll even save more of your hard earned cash that way!

SO GROSS

DMAG's Grossest of Pages

Is there actually blood in blood blisters?

Yup, they don't call them blood blisters for nothing you know! Like most other blisters, blood blisters can occur when unprotected skin is pinched too much and too hard. This can cause blood vessels underneath the skin's surface to become damaged and even break without the skin itself breaking! Blood spills from the broken vessel but is trapped by the enclosing skin, so it forms an icky looking bubble of blood underneath called a blood blister.

Question by Hannah Radvan

Why do all bats wee and poo on themselves?

Hmmm now who told you that bats do that? Sorry to say, but we think someone's pulling you wing-err, leg! Bats tend to poo and wee whilst flying, which is great food for all the hungry plants below. And although bats do sleep upside down, when they wake up busting to go, these flighty fellas are more than smart enough to right themselves before they take care of business. What a relief.

How can some people drink milk and then squirt it out of their eyes?

Now that's nasty! This rare party trick is usually due to an anomaly, whether inborn or due to surgery, in the eye's tear duct. Normally, tears flow down the tear ducts and out the nose. However, for people like Ilker Yilmaz, who currently holds the record for the farthest distance one can squirt milk out of their eyes, they can send the liquid from the mouth, backwards up the tear ducts and, by adding extra pressure to this movement, can squirt what they've drunk, out. Freaky!

Question by Amber Joye Cook

• ACTIVE ZONE • ACTIVE ZONE • THE DMAG HEALTH REPORT!

Been Cooking Lately?

If the answer is no, then jump into this Bean Haystack recipe!

You'll need: an adult to help you cook, an onion, a teaspoon of cooking oil, a small red capsicum (chopped), a can of crushed tomatoes, a can of kidney (or chilli) beans and plain corn chips.

Heat oil, onion and capsicum in a large frying pan until soft. Add the crushed tomatoes and:

beans and heat through. Serve this mixture over the corn chips. You can even top this with shredded lettuce, low fat grated cheese or cucumber. Yum!

Be Bean Smart

So what's so special about beans anyway? Well, let's see ... not only are most varieties low in fat (sorry dudes, soya and jelly beans don't count), they're also stacked full of fibre and are low GI, which means they're excellent for keeping up those energy levels all day long. Not convinced yet? Well, on top of all that, they also contain potassium and folic acid, which your heart will love. Wow!

Good Golf

Some may tell you that a sport like golf is strictly for the olds, but don't believe them. Researchers in Europe have just discovered that no matter how old you are, swinging that putter about could actually prolong your life by up to five years. No way! OK, you caught us. It's not actually the swinging that helps you out, but the walking. Did you know that a golfer usually has to walk a massive six kilometres in order to complete a full 18 hole round? Now that's what we call a load of exercise.

OLYMPIC WHEELS

The 2008 Beijing Olympics is wheelie great, especially now that BMX riding is an event! We chatted to speedster Khalen Young about how he's feeling about competing.

DMAG: How did you get into BMX racing?

Khalen: My older brothers used to race and I tagged along as a kid. When they got older, they got cars and I stayed at it and persevered.

DMAG: How are you feeling about the Olympics?

Khalen: It'll be all right. I can't think about it too much, you know? I just approach it as another race < I'll get too nervous otherwise.

DMAG: What does BMXing involve?

Khalen: It's like a running race. Eight people line up and you just go.

DMAG: How long is the track?

Khalen: About 350 metres. (The race) only goes for like thirty seconds. It's really smooth and the jumps are kind of big.

DMAG: What's the hardest thing about racing?

Khalen: The strict training regime. Up at 6.30am and in bed by 9pm. Train twice a day, six days a week.

DMAG: How many bikes do you have?

Khalen: Six or seven. I've got two good race bikes and the rest are just training bikes, cross-country bikes, stuff like that.

DMAG: Any favourites?

Khalen: My gold race bike.

DMAG: Can kids get into BMXing without a BMX bike?

Khalen: It's easier to teach a person to race than to teach 'em skills. If they always ride their bike then the transition into racing's a lot easier.

DMAG: Do you do any other X-treme sports?

Khalen: Erm ... Xbox? (laughs)

The 2008 Beijing Olympic Games is on from August 8 - 24 with the BMX races being held from August 20-21.

NEW AND OLD

BMX riding isn't the only new sport in the 2008 Beijing Olympics. Other additions are: the 10 kilometre open water swim, the women's 3000 metre steeplechase, the A33 wheelchair class, and the Laser Radial two person dingy (women's) sailing event. Phew! They may all sound a little funny, but they're nothing compared to the games that the ancient Olympics used to have. Imagine how pankration wrestling (sort of a mixture of boxing and wrestling), or even chariot racing would go down these days!

IN FINE FORM

The riders in the TV series Moslems may know a thing or two about equestrian sports, but for those of you who are a little unsure about it all, here's the DMMO dictionary of its three horsey disciplines:

Eventing: Out of the ring and into the country. Riders take their horses off a cross-country course of jumps and obstacles.

Dressage: Time to show off your stuff! Riders and their horses perform a set routine of walks, trots and canter and then perform their own individually choreographed routine to the beat of a song.

Jumping: Well for it ... how! Riders lead their horses through an obstacle course of artificial bars and bodies of water. The 2008 Beijing Olympics' equestrian events will be running from August 9 - 21.

WOW! Lately, Game Guru's been around the globe. My last stop was Paris, France to check out the amazing Ubidays 2008. Some of the fantastic Ubisoft games on show were Shaun White Snowboarding, Soul Calibur IV and the latest Raving Rabbids game! Also this issue there's a fun feature on the de Blob characters, and hands-on previews of the death-defying Pure and hilarious Drawn To Life: SpongeBob Edition. Not to mention, reviews of Big Beach Sports and the new Pokémon game. There's stacks of gaming here, so let's get rolling...

SPECIAL FEATURE

THE COLOURFUL CHARACTERS OF CHROMA CITY!
Introducing de BLOB
and his gang of colour crusaders ...

We already know that de Blob's gonna be big this year. So while we're waiting to get our hands on a final copy of it, I thought it'd be cool to check out some of the groovy characters in de Blob's wacky world!

Inkys

Boo ... hiss! These are the baddies in black. They're a pretty mean bunch who are out to suck all the colour and fun from de Blob's planet.

de Blob

Hooray! de Blob is our hero, the colour crusader that you will take control of in this multi-coloured, musical, platform adventure. He's got the moves, grooves and colours that will allow him to overthrow the Inkt Corp. and free Chroma's inhabitants.

The Pro

He's the brains of the Colour Underground. If you see him, get de Blob to chat with him, and you'll usually score a cool colour mission.

Arty

She's an artist. If de Blob

chats with Arty, he's sure to get a challenging painting mission.

Zip

An extreme sports nut, you'll find Zip hooning around Chroma City on his roller blades. Catch him and grab some speedy missions.

Bif

He's a bit of a "boof-head" and a master of Paint-Fu. When de Blob hooks up with Bif you're in for some splat-tastic combat.

SAMBA DE AMIGO

Wii

Single & Multiplayer

Rating: T.B.A.

If you're looking for some musical madness with a Mexican flavour, you can't go past Samba De Amigo. This cult classic first appeared on Dreamcast and offered gamers some wickedly addictive music/rhythm styled gameplay using maracas! The cool sombrero wearing monkey is back, but now he's shaking the Wii-mote and Nunchuck. There's no doubt that this is gonna be one tasty party game!

■ VERDICT: This is sure to be musical mayhem at its best!

SHAUN WHITE SNOWBOARDING

Wii (also on Xbox 360/PS3)

Single & Multiplayer

Rating: T.B.A.

He's an Olympic gold medalist and an extreme sports superstar, and now he's hitting the slopes in his very own snowboarding game. Shaun White is a legend and his new snowboarding game looks set to go ballistic. I got to check out this ripper game at Ubidays and the Wii version looked like a total scream! Sporting the Wii Balance Board as your main controls, players can carve, jump, grind and pull off insane tricks by moving their bodies – it's awesome!

■ VERDICT: Shaun White Snowboarding has really got the goods. Sick visuals, exciting, extreme sports styled gameplay, and some of the coolest controls ever on Wii!

SPORE

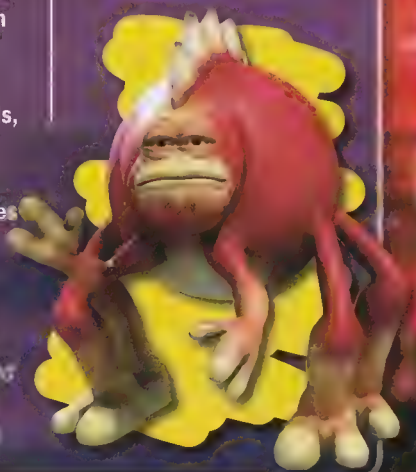

PC (also on DS)

Single Player

Rating: T.B.A.

From the wild imagination of Will Wright, the creator of The Sims, comes an epic intergalactic journey that allows players to create and evolve alien life forms. You will guide your creations, as they become intelligent and start to form their own civilisation. It's totally up to you how your alien race will look, act, and survive!

■ VERDICT: Spore has been a long time coming, but it looks like it'll be one of the hottest games of this year. See www.electronicarts.com/au/en-au/games/pc/spore/to download the free trial of the Spore Creature Creator – cool! (Check with your parents first about downloading though!)

COOL COLLECTABLES!

MARIO KART DS SUPER RACE SET

We all know that Mario and the gang have been tearing up the tracks on Mario Kart Wii, but now all you Nintendo fanboys and girls can take the race to the real world with the Mario Kart DS Super Race Set. Featuring about three metres of track, two of your fave kart racers (Mario and Yoshi) and two triggered controllers to get your racers going, this is some of the best racing action to be had on this side of the Mushroom Kingdom!

LEGO INDY DS ACCESSORIES

Are you a huge fan of the latest LEGO Indiana Jones game? Well, if you've been playing LEGO Indy on DS, you might like to grab some of these cool accessories to spruce up your DS Lite! There's the awesome leather-look LEGO Indy Trifold Wallet which protects your DS and has more than enough space to store three games and also comes with three spare stylus. And then there's the LEGO Indy Legends Kit, which sports a brilliant green silicone, LEGO textured, DS glove, an Indy system wrap and a jumbo-sized Indy stylus.

NINTENDO DS

HANDS ON- PLAYTEST!

DRAWN TO LIFE: SpongeBob SquarePants Edition DS

Single Player
Rating: T.B.A.

Most gamers will remember the brilliant DS game Drawn to Life! Well, now it's been given a wild SpongeBob twist. Players can once again draw their stylus and battle to save the world – only this time, it's the wacky underwater world of Bikini Bottom! I recently, scored some quality time with the SpongeBob Edition of Drawn to Life, and discovered that it totally rocks! Once again, players' imaginations can run wild as they create a hero, weapons, vehicles, and all manner of bizarre items in the game – awesome!

HANDS ON - PLAYTEST!

SOUL
CALIBUR IVPS3 (also on Xbox
360)Single & Multiplayer
Rating: TBA.

The biggest highlight of my recent Ubidsays trip had to be my "hands-on" time with the incredible Soul Calibur IV. This game is an amazing amount of fun, particularly if you're a fan of brawlers. It's also one of the most stunning looking games to be released on next-gen. I played the four character demo on both PS3 and Xbox 360, and they were a joy to behold. Yoda and Darth Vader were wicked additions to the game, as was the new character, Hilde with her dual long/short range attacks. Add online multiplayer, and you have what could easily become the ultimate fighter!

VERDICT: I'm a HUGE fan of the Soul Calibur series and it looks like the guys at Namco Bandai have done it again. Soul Calibur IV looks amazing. The gameplay is slick and the roster includes two legendary Star Wars characters, Darth Vader (on PS3) and Yoda (on Xbox 360). A must for all older gamers!

PURE

Xbox 360 (also on PS3/PC)

Single & Multiplayer

Rating: TBA.

Recently, I was given a chance to strap on a helmet and take Pure for a spin. With so many arcade-styled off-road racers coming our way, it's gonna be extremely hard to choose between them. But I'll tell you this; Pure is sure to be at the front of the pack when they arrive, because it really delivers when it comes to crazy ATV thrills! Sporting absolutely spectacular visuals, a brilliant sense of speed, gravity-defying stunts and a wild sense of fun, Pure plays like SSX on quad-bikes. Jump onto one of Pure's virtual ATVs, and you'll be pulling some major air in no time at all - it's a heart-stopper!

VERDICT: Pure is a blistering, off-road racing experience that is sure to keep you bolted to the edge of your seat.

STAR WARS Force Unleashed

Wii (also on Xbox 360/PS3/
DS/PSP)

Single & Multiplayer

Rating: T.B.A.

If you've ever dreamed of being a Jedi Knight from the Star Wars flicks, Force Unleashed is just the game for you! Players strap on their light sabres and become Darth Vader's secret apprentice. The next-gen versions are looking amazing, however the Wii version I recently played delivered the goods when it came to multiplayer duels. It's a whole lot of fun unleashing the dark side of the Force!

■ VERDICT: Force Unleashed is shaping up to be an epic sci-fi action game. The Wii version allows players to wield the Wii-mote like a light sabre and battle in Jedi duels against a friend, making it a must for all you Star Wars fans!

SUPER SMASH BROS. BRAWL

Wii

Single & Multiplayer

Rating: PG

Nintendo's legendary trailer has just smashed its way onto Wii, delivering some of the best multiplayer entertainment on the console. For those of you who are unfamiliar with the Smash Bros series, it's a frenzied brawler that allows players to choose their favourite Nintendo mascots and battle it out in various combat levels.

This allows for some brilliant fantasy matchups, like seeing Mario kick Pikachu's yellow butt! There's also a fantastic multiplayer element (this is when the game's at its best) that adds stacks to the fun factor. You can challenge your mates (with up to four players battling it out simultaneously) and settle those arguments over who's the toughest Nintendo character.

GAMES OF THE MONTH!

You want more? Well, there are over 30 Nintendo mascots to choose from (the game is a virtual history lesson on fresh videogame characters), and

There are a few surprises on the roster like Solid and Solid Snake from MGS. Add around 40 thrilling levels, loads of customisation options, online multiplayer, and the Subspace Emulator single player mode and you're left with one of the best Wii titles ever created!

Finally, at Ubidays
'08, I found it: the latest Raving Rabbids game. Now we all know that there have been leaps forward in game control, (just look at the Wii-mote),
but now, you can actually play
games using your butt! Yeah, you heard me right, and it's all

Butt control

Trust me
when I say,
a lot more games will start using this awesome
controller.

Wacky and

fun, those bad-boy bunnies have taken over your TV in all sorts of mini-game mayhem!

Sledding it

The highlight of getting
"hands-on" and "butt-down"

with Rabbids was the insane
sled ride game, where players
take control of a Rabbid
that's riding on what looks like a wildebeest! It's fast, crazy, and all controlled using your butt! Just sit on the Balance Board and the fun begins. Leaning your butt left and right allows players to steer, and leaning back and forwards controls speed.

It's easy to pick-up, but a challenge to master, 'cos
of the obstacles scattered around the track.

VERDICT: Is butt control the way of the future? I dunno, but I will say that it was a lot of fun! Rayman Raving Rabbids

EMMY AND THE INCREDIBLE SHRINKING RAT

By Lynne Jonell

No one pays any attention to Emmy, it's as though she's invisible. Her only friend in the class is the talking Rat, but only she can hear him – is she going crazy? When a boy in her class hears the rat too, things don't seem so weird, until the boy shrinks when the rat bites him. But a shrunk boy is the least of Emmy's problems – her nanny is horrible and her parents are like different people, they're not the caring, loving people they used

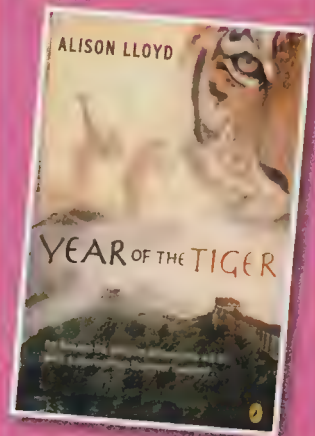

Will Hu be able to save his family, his town and even the Empire? Gripping and action packed.

YEAR OF THE TIGER

By Alison Lloyd

Hu's family are poor noodle makers, living next to the crumbling Great Wall of China. When Emperor Han sends his troops to fix the wall, Hu's mum knows it will mean taxes, trouble or both. But for Hu it means a new friend, Ren. He's the spoilt son of the Commander, but Hu's willing to put up with him because they're practising archery together in preparation for a contest. But then it all goes horribly wrong.

THE CASE OF THE DIAMOND SHADOW

By Sophie Masson

Daisy Miller can't believe her luck when she's offered an exciting new job with a rich and eccentric Australian lady in London. Her friend George is quite jealous, as Daisy will be leaving him behind. So when George gets the equally unbelievable chance to work with top detective and crime writer, Woodley-Fox, he jumps at it. It seems their paths are to cross again as they're both on the trail of the daring jewel thief, The Shadow. A glamorous mystery filled with adventure!

RHYMING BOY

By Steven Herrick

Rhyming Boy, otherwise known as Jayden Hayden, would really like to know who is father is. Not least because he has a father-son event coming up at school and he wants to be able to take someone. He knows the footy mad boys next door will be there with their dad and he's really like to show his new dad off. Jayden knows his mum is obsessed with a footy player also called Jayden, so could he be rivaled? Warm, funny and moving, this is a great story about a boy, family and footy.

MEET MUCHAMORE

Do you love Robert Muchamore,

the guy who wrote the Cherub series?

Well hopefully you entered the comp to meet him, and ride in a Hummer, but if you didn't, here's the good news – you might still be able to see him! (Sorry, we couldn't arrange the Hummer.) Robert is touring Australia and New Zealand and there are still some events that aren't booked out. So what are you waiting for? Jump online at www.cherubmission.com.au to find out where you can meet him!

THE DANGEROUS DAYS OF DANIEL X

By James Patterson

You've seen a sneak peek of it in DMAG already but here's our review of this book – it's brilliant! So action packed that you can't put it down, this is the story of Daniel X, a kid who's actually an alien. Daniel's hunting down another alien called the Prayer who killed his parents, but in the meantime, there are plenty of creatures hunting down Daniel, so he has to constantly be on guard. It's a good thing Daniel can shape shift – he can even pretend to be his parents (yes, it's a little bit weird considering they're dead). This book is like The X Files meets Men in Black meets a teenage kid – it's great! Highly recommended!

MOONSHADOW

EYE OF THE BEAST

By Simon Higgins

Meet Moonshadow. He's the youngest agent of the Grey Light Order. And he's about to be assigned his first mission ...

Moonshadow sat on his heels, legs folded beneath him on his bedroll, rubbing one eye and staring at the drab walls of his tiny room. His pre-dawn test had left him exhausted, though perhaps, he thought, it was really the sleepless nights leading up to it that had worn him out.

Three nights he had lain on his back from the midnight temple bell to dawn, staring at the ceiling, wondering what form his test would take, and if he could pass it. With it finally behind him now, he had obeyed Brother Eagle's last orders with great pleasure. Return to your room. Rest a full day and night. Then prepare your tools and clothes for your first real mission.

In the distance, through thin wooden walls and sliding paper screens, he heard Brother Eagle's voice once more, though the words were muffled. They drifted from the monastery's little kitchen, along with the sizzle of a cooking plate and the smell of spring onions lightly frying on it. Then he heard Heron speak. Her tone was unusually sharp. Moon stood up and stretched, evening meal was being prepared just in time.

He glanced up at the narrow window high on one wall of his room. It was already dark outside, so he had missed the chance to intone his second furube for the day. Moon sighed. The shrugging off sutra was supposed to be uttered, its stillness entered into, each dawn and each sunset, as well as just before going into action.

He broke into a sly grin. He'd been warned never to skip it, lest that become a bad habit. But if he skipped it now, just this once, dispensed with reciting it late, who would know? Beating Groundspider and his huge appetite to the kitchen was surely more important. Groundspider could out-eat a sumo wrestler, maybe two.

Moon slid open his door, slipped out into the darkened corridor and followed the alluring smells. Now, ginger, pine nuts and sliced radish were hitting the hot plate and the first at that long, low table would surely get the freshest, biggest serve. He was only two strides from the kitchen's sliding door when he heard Heron speak his name. Moonshadow froze, listening, hoping that she and Eagle were too engrossed in their conversation to hear – or sense – him creeping to the corridor.

‘I’ve always been the perfect little thing,’ he heard Eagle say softly. ‘Maybe that’s why she told me to find him that morning, though – for her eyes.’

Moonshadow sank into the bed, listening to his breath test their sharp ears pick it up. He turned his head to one side and parted his teeth to increase the range of his own hearing. Her reply was calm, but passion put it in deeper words.

‘Come now, Eagle, have we not all grown older – at him – than perhaps we should?’

‘Indeed, my concern is not some motherly urge, it is professional.’

‘You heard Groundspider’s report on Moonshadow’s final test. Has he also grown confused? True, he treats the boy as a younger brother, but his opinion in such matters has always been sound.

Moonshadow’s raw

talent is exceptional, and now, his skills are honed.

Young or not, he does vex any handful of good samurai

and, in single combat,

most shinobi for that matter. Don’t forget

how much extra

work we’ve all put into him. You are wrong. He’s our masterpiece, and he is ready.

‘I don’t doubt that his skills are ready,’ Heron said quietly. ‘But he is not. This may be the one flaw in our training process: he’s tasted so little of life, of the world. Known so few people. His prowess is indeed remarkable, I agree, but the inexperienced make awful blunders. That is his weakness, and that may –’

‘Cause him to fail?’ Moon heard Eagle scrape something from the cooking plate into a dish.

‘I say he will not fail. He will succeed and return to us alive. For two reasons. First, have you forgotten all that White Nun predicted when she pointed him out among the other orphans, while he was yet small and sickly?’

‘But, of course not,’ Heron muttered. ‘And she’s not any more proved right about his rapport with animals. What’s the other reason?’

Moon edged closer to the door, fascinated. The White Nun! Groundspider had spoken of this unusual Buddhist seer, saying that he visited the Order once every few years, and was said to wield that Old Country’s so-called insight. Those skilled in insight could discern a stranger’s true nature, or glimpse things fate had in store for them. Was she the real reason he had been chosen?

Beyond the door, Eagle gave an irritably huff. ‘My second reason? I say he will not fail because he must not fail. So many are missions awaiting our agents now. This one, as you know, was never intended for him. It called for a face that our enemies wouldn’t recognise, yes, but one more seasoned should be undertaking it. Moon should tackle an easier task first time out.’

But as you also know, our original choice now lies badly wounded and, at last report, may not live to see next week. Our need is desperate, and if all the White Nun said about him proves true –

‘You are master of our Order and dear to my heart,’ Heron said slowly. ‘But please heed my warning. To send him on this mission, so inexperienced in all but the shadow crafts themselves, is to set a teacup on the edge of a well.’

Eagle sniffed. ‘Then all we can do is hope that he stopped abruptly. Moonshadow heard the swish of robes and he turned and scuttled silently back to his room. As he slid his door shut, the kitchen door opened.

‘Was that him?’ Moon heard Heron whisper. ‘How did we not hear him? Were we that distracted by our little tussle?’

‘I told you he was good,’ Eagle mumbled. ‘How many could spy on us? You see? He is ready.’

Mysteries and Magic 8 balls

Jen Storer is the author of the fabulous new book Tan Callahan's Secret Spy Files: The Mystery of the Purple Haunt. Read on to find out her secrets ...

Q: Are you similar to Tan in any way?

A: Yes. I'm a terrible stickybeak!

Q: What is the best thing about Tan?

A: She's one of the weird kids and they're always the most interesting!

Q: What is the worst?

A: She doesn't know when to keep her mouth shut.

Q: What should all secret spies have?

A: A shadowy, crafty personality and a good hiding spot for their files.

Q: Did you ever keep a diary like Tan as a kid, and what did you write in it?

A: Move closer so I can whisper. I had a diary AND I kept Secret Spy Files. I was in a secret club called EPIC;

the 'Extraordinary Private Investigation Club'. There were four of us. We kept extensive records on the activities of our neighbours. They were a highly suspicious group of people. That's all I can say.

Q: Are you secretly scared of horses like Tan is?

A: Terrified! I got chased by one when I was ten. It had big teeth and wild eyes and it was breathing down my neck as I ran. That horse was a lot like Lily's horse, Casper. Very creepy. Very ... unpredictable.

Q: Did you ever have a teacher like Miss Dragone?

A: My Grade Four teacher was Miss Bell. She was scary but she was also very kind. She took us to the local butcher shop so we could watch them make sausages. It was gross. It was a Grade Four highlight.

Q: What was the most fun about writing this book?

A: Spending time with the Callahan family. They're all nutty, I love their pets, and their mum cooks the best food.

Q: What tips do you have for budding writers?

A: Always keep a notebook, and get into the habit of eavesdropping.

Q: If you had a magic eight ball like Tan's, what three things would you ask it?

A: I do have a magic eight ball. It is a valuable tool. Lately I asked it these three questions:

1) Will Tan be famous?

It is decidedly so.

2) Will I write a sequel?

You may rely on it.

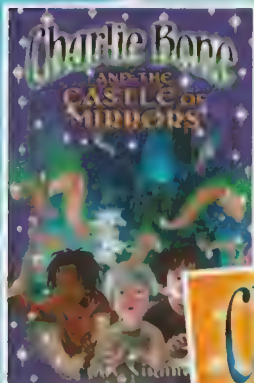

3) Will my son clean his room?

My sources say no.

Win!

OUTCAST

By Michelle Paver

Our hero Torak, from the Chronicles of Ancient Darkness series, is back in a new adventure, Outcast. Here's a sneak peek ...

The viper quivered down the riverbank and placed its sleek head on the water, and Torak stopped a few paces away to let it drink.

His arms ached from carrying the red deer antlers, so he set them aside and crouched in the bracken to watch. Snakes are wise, and know many secrets. Maybe this one would help him deal with his.

The viper drank with unhurried sips. Raising its head, it regarded Torak, flicking out its tongue to taste his scent. Then it coiled neatly back on itself and vanished into the ferns.

It had given him no sign.

But you don't need a sign, he told himself wearily. You know what to do. Just tell them. Soon as you get back to camp. Just say, Renn. Fin. Kedinn. Two moons ago, something happened. They held me down, they put a mark on my chest. And now

No. That wasn't any good. He could picture Renn's face, Fin, our best friend – and you've been lying to me for two whole moons!

He put his head in his hands.

After a while he heard rustling and gasped.

up to see a reindeer on the opposite bank. It was standing on three legs, furiously scratching its bleeding antler with one hind hoof. Sensing that Torak wasn't hurting it, it went on scratching. The antlers were bleeding, the itch must be so bad that the only relief was to make them hurt.

That's what I should do, thought Torak. Cut it out. Make it hurt. In secret. Then no one need ever know.

The trouble was, even if he could bring himself to do it, it wouldn't work. To get rid of the tattoo, he'd have to perform the proper rite. He'd learnt that from Renn, whom he'd approached in a roundabout way, using the zigzag tattoos on her wrists as an excuse.

'If you don't do the rite,' she'd told him, 'the marks just come back.'

'They come back?' Torak had been horrified.

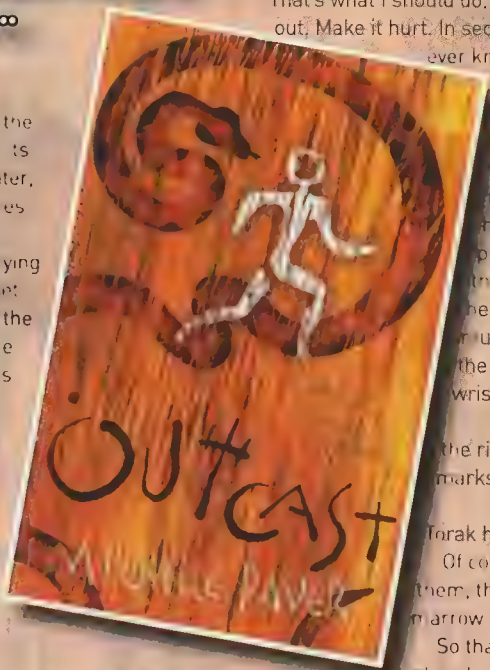

Of course. You can't see them, they're deep in the marrow. But they're still there.

So that was the end of that, unless he could get her to tell him about the rite without revealing why he needed to know.

The reindeer gave an irritable shake and trotted off into the Forest; and Torak picked up the antlers and started back for camp. They were a lucky find, big enough for everyone in the clan to get a piece, and perfect for making fish-hooks and hammers for knapping flint. Fin-Kedinn would be pleased. Torak tried to fix his mind on that.

It didn't work. Until now, he hadn't understood how much a secret can set you apart. He thought about it all the time, even when he was hunting with Renn and Wolf.

It was early in the Moon of the Salmon Run, and a sharp east wind carried a strong smell of fish. As Torak made his way beneath the pines, his boots crunched on flakes of bark scattered by woodpeckers. To his left, the Green River chattered after its long imprisonment under the ice, while to his right, a rockface rose towards Broken Ridge. In places it was scarred, where the clans had hacked out the red slate which brings hunting luck. He heard the clink of stone on stone. Someone was quarrying.

That should be me, Torak told himself. I should be making a new axe. I should be doing things. This can't go on, he said out loud.

'You're right,' said a voice. 'It can't.'

They were crouching on a ledge ten paces above him: four boys and two girls, glaring down. The Boar Clan wore their brown hair cut to shoulder length, with a fringe; tusks at their necks, stiff hide mantles across their shoulders. The Willows had wovenbark strips sewn in spirals on their jerkins, and three black leaves tattooed on their brows in a permanent frown. All were older than Torak. The boys had wispy beards, and beneath the girls' clan-tattoos, a short red bar showed that they'd had their first moon bleed.

They'd been quarrying: Torak saw stone dust on their tusks. Just ahead of him, he spotted a pine trunk ladder notched with footholds, which they'd propped against the rockface, to climb up to the ledge. But they were no longer interested in slate.

Torak stared back, hoping he didn't look scared. What do you want?

Aki, the Boar Clan leader's son, jerked his head

at the antlers. 'Those are mine. Put them down.'

'No they're not,' said Torak. 'I found them.' To remind them he had weapons, he hoisted his bow on his shoulder and touched the blue slate knife at his hip.

Aki wasn't impressed. 'They're mine.'

'Which means you stole them,' said a Willow girl.

'If that was true,' Torak told Aki, 'you'd have put your mark on them and I'd have left them alone.'

'I did. On the base. You rubbed it off.'

'Of course I didn't,' said Torak in disgust.

Then he saw what he should have seen before: a smudge of earthblood at the base of one antler, where a boar tusk had been drawn on. His ears burned. 'I didn't see it. And I don't trust you.'

'Then put them down and get out of here,' said a boy called Raut, who'd always struck Torak as fiercer than most. Unlike Aki, who was spoiling for a fight.

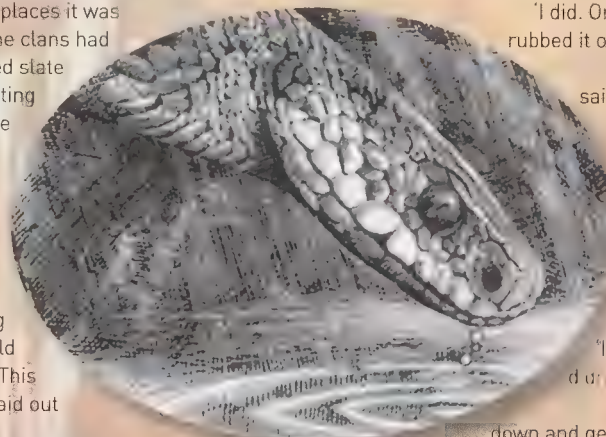

Torak didn't feel like giving him one. 'All right,' he said briskly, 'made a mistake. Didn't see the mark. They're yours.'

'What makes you think it's that easy?' said Aki.

Torak sighed. He'd come a long way before. A bully: unsure if he was a leader, and desperate to prove it with his fists.

You think you're special, sneered Aki. 'Because Fin Kedin took you in, and you can talk to wolves and you're a spirit walker. He takes his fingers into over the scard hairs on his chin, and checking they were still there. 'Truth is, you only live with the Ravens because your own clan will never come near you. And Fin Kedin doesn't trust you enough to make you his foster son.'

Q: What was the best mission you ever went on?

A The Mega Mission was definitely the best yet – but I can't tell you why! That information is definitely top-secret. The head of GIB, Agent Big Boss, doesn't want anyone to know that BIG had a secret agent who could destroy all of our gadgets, or that I went to the moon and back ... Oops!

Q: I have heard the Mega Mission books come with a free spy tool?

A Er, I can't confirm or deny this, although if there WERE free spy tools involved they would be GIB-issued and highly powerful. Check out the website for more cool information – www.zacpower.com.

Psst ... wanna know a secret? Don't let anyone see you reading this 'cos it's a top secret interview with the man we all love to read about but no one's ever seen ... Zac Power!

Q: Who is Zac Power?

A I'm a spy for the Government Investigation Bureau, or GIB for short. My code name is Agent

A Duh, my identity is top-secret. If I showed you my face then I wouldn't be a top spy, would I?

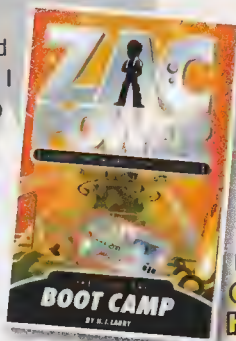

Q: Who designs and creates your gadgets?

A My brother

Leon designs most of my gadgets. He's a huge tech-head, so instead of going on missions like me, he works on all the technical stuff back at headquarters.

Q: And which is your favourite gadget and vehicle?

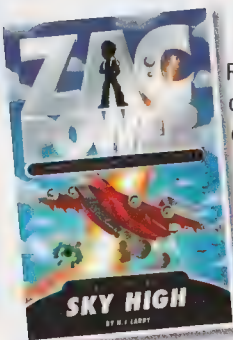

A It's hard to pick a favourite gadget, but the Rock Star. I'm only 12 years old, but I've been top of the Spy Ladder for 15 weeks running!

Q: Why don't you

ever show your face?

"O kay class" "In English class today."

"Tomorrow we're going on our Year 5 camp and I want to be prepared, so here are some notes. Take ONE and pass them on."

My name is Lily Turner and I absolutely HATE school camps! The notes finally came around. I took ONE, then I handed them to my best friend Kordella King. "I'm going to do anything to get out of this school camp," I told Kordella. "Just you wait and see."

I woke up at 5.30 the next morning and I went into my room. I got down on my hands and knees and started to crawl. I went over to her dressing table. I opened the drawer and pulled out her make-up kit. Inside it were things I never knew she had.

went! I was looking for that," I said.

I buried my hand deep in the make-up kit and found a red lip liner - just what I needed! I can't go to camp if I'm sick. And if I'm not sick, I can pretend to be sick.

I started to draw circles on my face and colour them in.

"What are you doing?" said a voice.

Uh oh, busted! It was my older brother Jason.

"Nothing" I said in an innocent voice. "Don't tell dad."

"Say 'please'," said Jason.

"Okay, please then," I said.

"Say ..." Jason started

"Enough already!" I interrupted him. "Just don't tell dad ... Cough cough, splutter splutter ... How does that sound?"

"Pretty good," said Jason trying to keep a straight face.

"Huh," I sighed "what's wrong with it?"

"Nothing," he said "It's just that dad's at the door."

I turned around and sure enough dad was standing there.

"Damn it!" I said "So close and yet so far."

"And now you're so BUSTED!"

said dad.

"Great, I'm grounded," I thought to myself. Later that morning, I heard the doorbell ring. I shouldn't get it while I'm grounded. But what if I do ...

the door and opened it. Kordella was standing there.

"I'm grounded," I said "I can't do anything or go anywhere for a month. Wait a second! Shouldn't you be at the Year 5 camp?"

"Well, it's

"Hang on a sec! YES YES! I'm grounded, so I don't have to go to the Year 5 camp! WOO HOO! But why aren't you there?" I asked.

"Well, I was just trying to tell you that it's been postponed till next month ... when you won't be grounded any more."

"YAY ... what?" I said "Why?"

"Well, apparently Mr Ryans found out that he has to teach ballet lessons for the rest of the month!" she said, giggling. Then we both fell down on the couch, cracking up laughing at the thought of Mr Ryans doing ballet.

"What is going on here?" asked dad. Bad news, dad was back from shopping. Uh oh, BUSTED!

Ever wished that the ground beneath you would just open up and suck you away from an embarrassing situation? Well these guys have, but now they're big enough to share it with us!

I was at school camp and for one of our activities we went on a humungous bike ride. At the end of the ride we all pushed our bikes up a hill in one long line.

I was last. We were going to ride down a hill really fast.

After EVERYBODY had gone, it was my turn. I was so scared, the instructor had to calm me down.

Luckily I had just come to that school so nobody really knew me!

When I was four my sister took a photo of me on the toilet and showed it to my cousins. I was so embarrassed!

THANKS MUM!

EMBARRASSING MOMENT OF THE MONTH

I was at the shopping centre and the trolley full of things I bought. I saw my mum with a trolley on I said "Can I put these in there?" And she said in a mean voice "Well sorry but no." I said "But this is all mine!" She said "I don't want it." I was the most embarrassed moment of my life.

FENGUN

My family and I were at Hungry Jacks. My brother came from behind and tickled me. I flung around and knocked his drink. It went everywhere and almost hit one of the workers. I was so embarrassed.

SAMANTHA

If you have an embarrassing moment you'd like to share, email redfaces@dmag.com.au with your story, name and address. If your story is chosen as the most embarrassing of the month, then you'll win a fab DMAG showbag.

Dear Maggie

SAVE YOURSELF SOME MAJOR EMBARRASSMENT BY ASKING MAGGIE HOW TO KEEP YOUR COOL IN STICKY SITUATIONS.

Dear Maggie,

I got into a lot of trouble with my mum because I SMSed a guy that I had a crush on. I now feel really bad and I'm scared to talk to his family. What should I do?

I need your help.

Natalie

Hi Natalie,

It sounds like your mum is quite upset about you SMSing this boy. If you haven't already, I suggest that you have a chat with her to find out why she's so concerned over your message. It may be that she just needs some reassurance that you're mature enough to use SMS sensibly.

As for his family, if you have inadvertently hurt their feelings, then apologise. If you haven't, then don't stress too much. Everyone makes mistakes and everyone forgets, so don't feel too bad.

WRITE DOWN YOUR WORRIES AND SEND THEM TO MAGGIE@DMAG.COM.AU
